AGED CARE WORKERS AND DIABETES CARE

Diabetes is the fastest growing chronic condition in Australia, and around one quarter of all people living in Residential Aged Care Facilities have diabetes<sup>1</sup>. Aged Care Workers play a pivotal role in supporting people living with diabetes and need to be skilled in best practice diabetes care.

Who is this course for:

- Aged Care Workers & Assistants in Nursing
- Anyone working with and supporting the elderly

1.2 million people in Australia are diagnosed with diabetes

7,750

people die from diabetes complications in Australia each year

COURSE OVERVIEW

This eLearning program will provide Aged Care Workers, Assistants in Nursing and anyone working with the elderly with a basic understanding of diabetes, and how it relates to their work and the situations that arise from their role.

By completing this course, participants will:

- ✓ Have a basic understanding of diabetes, and how to recognise signs and symptoms of diabetes in residents.
- ✓ Recognise the difference between high and low blood glucose levels, and know the appropriate action to take
- ✓ Be able to identify and flag issues which may lead to the reduction in diabetes related complications, such as falls, incontinence and infections
- ✓ Improve their ability to support the person living with diabetes and have a meaningful conversation
